Stella Maris

The Stella Maris is located at Governor Nicholls and Chartres Streets in the Vieux Carré Historic District. This location has served as home to many families dating as far back as the 1830s.

The original town houses occupying the site were demolished and St. Mary's Recreational Center was completed in 1948. The center, a neo-classical structure, was designed by architects Herbert Benson and George Riehl. It housed a large gymnasium, an open-air swimming pool and other associated facilities.

In 1995, it was completely renovated by award-winning architect Kenneth Schroeder, FAIS, in association with Brian Perry, RIBA, into a complex accommodating twenty distinctive luxury residences with public and private courtyards, balconies and swimming pool.

Stella Maris is four blocks from Jackson Square and one block from the French Market. It is on the fringe of the French Quarter's entertainment district, an area considered one of the best downtown residential locations. All of the charm and ambiance of the Vieux Carré are mirrored in the innovative architecture of Stella Maris, architecture that respects the character of the original structure.
